Antarctica

Antarctica sits at the "End of the World," and for this reason alone, is enough to compel many people to travel here. Like the early explorers who first visited this faraway continent in the 1800s, travelers today revel in the chance to venture to a pristine region where relatively few humans have stepped foot before.

The beautiful surroundings of the Antarctic Peninsula is a paradise for all divers, adventurers, naturalists and photographers with its amazing array of colours, moods and diverse wildlife. The opportunity to be in the company of thousands of penguins, watching whales and seals, and cruise around in zodiacs between brilliant white icebergs and ice floes will fill you with awe.
